

Every now and then Rushsoccer.com will have a story about a Rush player being called in to a US Youth National Team camp. Caitlin Fryer of the New York Rush Patriots however has been spending a lot of time playing with another Youth National team, the South African National team!

Caitlin (#9) is currently playing for the South African U17 national team (youngest player on the team) in qualifying matches for the FIFA U17 World Cup later this year. Caitlin has also been playing with the U20 South Africa team as they attempt to qualify for the U20 World Cup. Oh, and Caitlin is only 15!

Already a seasoned veteran at the international level, Caitlin played with the U17 South Africa team in the U17 World Cup held in Trinidad & Tobago in 2010. Caitlin's international career path towards participation in the 2016 Olympics in Brazil appears to be on the right path!
